There have been leveling-off periods. During 1971, the U.S. was successful in convincing the Turkish government to prohibit the growth of the opium poppy from which opium is made and ultimately heroin is produced.

made and utimately neron is produced.

While Turkey did not actually produce the heroin—it was processed in other countries—she was responsible for about 80 percent of the heroin that wound up on U.S. Illicit street markets during the late '60s and early '70s.

'70s.
During the Turkishprohibition, 1971-74; the effect was dramatic, with overdose deaths in this country dropping 30 percent. Heroin availability on the streets dropped and the U.S. addict population decreased from an estimated 500,000 to about 200,000. About 200,000. Increase in the number of eneroin addicts to the area of e00,000 to 900,000. While Turkey was out of the poppy business, Mexico, having previously supplied only about 10 percent of the heroin needed to supply U.S. addicts, got into the business with renewed to supply U.S. addicts, got into the business with renewed produce about 60 percent of our heroin supply, prior to the new Turkish crop. Indicators point to the probability of a resurgence of the drug problem, not only with heroin but all of the other drugs of abuse, from marijuana on up. Next: How does a beroin addict get started?

mother told the Press-Record reporter.
Mrs. Gladys Bass of the CYS staff said the youth and the mother of six are typical of the people seeking help who come to the CYS Clothing Center, where emphasis is placed on offering the type of clothing "people" want to share....good, quality clothes.

Since the center reopened for students in September, more than 520 clothing orders have been filled. Nearly all are for more than one garment.

In addition, through the agency, 110 layettes consisting of brand new infantwear have been received by young mothers, most of whom do not qualify for Public Aid mothers, most of whom do not qualify for Public Aid assistance prior to the baby's birth and receive no supportive funds until a few weeks after the infant arrives.

It was decided to revive the CYS Clothing Center when Church Women United (CWU) in the Quad-Cities closed its student clothing program last year.

No funds had been budgeted for a clothing center, so its development was gradual, Mrs. Bass explained.

Bass explained was gradual, Mrs.
Bass explained originally was operated by CWU as an attractive boiling-style store of the top of the former CYS building, across Niedringhaus Avenue from its present location, moved when the question of the most of clients and the quantity of clothing to be displayed, sized and stored.

The Church Women's group continued to sponsor the clothing outlet for several years, at different locations, until reluctantly relinquishing the project in 1977.

Several volunteers from the Church Women's organization still continue to work at the CYS center, it was learned.

"Right now, we are in urgent need of area residents willing to donate good clothing to help these children stay in school," Mrs. Bass said.

"It isn't difficult to imagine how hard it is for a boy or girl to go to school willingly, when the only clothes they have to wear are either too small, too large or

The Devils broke from an 8-8 tie with 3:59 remaining in the first quarter to a 17-13 lead at the end of the stanza.

The key for the Devils' success against highly-touted Lovejoy was Donald Gardner, according to Venice coach Ken Perkins.

Impact on cities of state-voted programs deserves scrutiny

Municipal and county officials throughout Illinois said at 11 hearings last summer that the state government either should cut back on some of its mandated programs or provide more financial help to carry them out. Their appeal apparently won't get results, although the pace of adding new mandates in the future may be slowed.
A special gubernatorial commission, the Commission on State Mandated Programs, said in January that more consideration said in January that more consideration said in January that more consideration should be given to property owners who pay local-level taxes. The report asserted that "the major source of local revenue, the property tax, doesn't keep pace with the increased cost of providing existing services, let alone new ones."

services, let alone new ones."
Yet, it said, the state has continued to expand communities' required programs.
The commission proposed that the General Assembly determine the economic impact of each new requirement that it adopts; form a permanent group to oversee the preparation of such fiscal analyses, and to approve them; and create advisory committees for all state-ordered arrograms to cuthe recessive regulation of programs to curb excessive regulation of them.

Richard Kolhauser, deputy director in Governor James Thompson's budget office, says, "The governor's hands are tied programs deserves scrutiny when it comes to doing anything about the costlient of the required services — pension and retirement benefits for police, firemen and others."

Sylvia Dennen, Thompson's chief alde for intergovernmental affairs, comments,
"It would make no difference if the state decided to pay more of the cost of required local programs. Anything that's done by any level of government is still paid for by the same source — the tazpayer."

But Seeven Sargent, Illinois Municipal League executive director, responds, "We think it makes a big difference for tazpayers whether programs are decided on at the local level or the state level.
When the state pays for something, anyone who pays income or sales taxes foots the bill. That group is vastly larger than the group of property owners who shoulder should be a state of the state of the property owners who shoulder administered programs."

Because the governor made this issue a prime topic during his 1976 campaign — and because government is more accountnable when decision making and funding are done at the same level — the topic merits full attention at Springfield in 1978 and ensuing years. The unacceptable alternative could be dozens of bankrupt cities.

Illinois Power Company said this week it is reducing electric usage in all of its buildings and this week it is reducing electric usage in all of its buildings and energy in the face of the looming coal shortage.

Effective Monday, Feb. 20, outdoor and indoor lighting were reduced to minimum requirements by the company were reduced to minimum requirements by the company has were set the first step in a plan the company has adopted to meet coal shortages. Full public company has adopted to meet coal shortages. Full public participation is being requested by the company at the same time.

The company asked that the admonition IP. has publicized widely over the last several years — to "use energy wisely" — be reviewed, and that all customers put into effect new electricity-saving measures where at all possible.

J. M. Williams, manager of energy supply for the company, estimated that at present III. Power is operating with a potential reserve of coal good for about 60 days.

"We believe our customers, in the main, are using energy visely," Williams said, "but additional measures are in order, and are requested."
